

Pediatric Nursing

1. A pediatrician notices that a 2-year-old child has a BMI significantly above the healthy range. What steps should the pediatrician take to address this issues?
 - a. Refer the child to a nutritionist immediately
 - b. Suggest the parents not worry about it
 - c. Recommend a strict diet plan
 - d. Assess the child's dietary habits and activity level

2. 2-year-old child is brought in for a growth assessment. How would the nurse differentiate between a child with normal height and one with stunted growth?
 - a. Using family history as the main determinant
 - b. Measuring the child's weight and head circumference

- c. Observing the child's ability to walk and talk
- d. By comparing the child's length to the standard growth chart for age

3. A 4-month-old infant is brought in for a check-up. If the infant's birth weight was 3.0 kg, what would the nurse expect the infant's weight to be at this visit, assuming normal growth?

- a. 12.0 kg
- b. 9.0 kg
- c. 6.0 kg
- d. 4.5 kg

3. What age should solid foods be introduced to an infant alongside breast milk or formula?

- a. 12 months
 - b. 6 months
 - c. 4 months
 - d. 3 months
4. Healthcare provider emphasizes the importance of breastfeeding for newborns. Which benefit is associated with colostrum specifically?
- a. It helps the baby sleep better.
 - b. It provides unnecessary calories.
 - c. It acts as a laxative to assist in passing meconium.
 - d. It increases the risk of gastrointestinal infections

5. Child starts to use simple sentences and can identify common objects. What developmental milestone is this child achieving?

- a. Personal and social development
- b. Fine motor skills
- c. Gross motor skills
- d. Speech and language development

6. A 38-year-old mother gives birth to a baby with a low birth weight. Which of the following factors could explain this outcome?

- a. Fetal position
- b. Maternal age

c. Preterm birth

d. Hereditary factors

7. A lactation consultant explains the importance of milk volume increase during the transition from colostrum to transitional milk. What reason does she give for this increase?

a. It helps to prevent the baby from crying.

b. It has no significant impact on the baby.

c. It reduces the mother's milk supply.

d. It meets the baby's growing appetite.

8. Parent notices their child can stack blocks and manipulate small objects with ease.
Which aspect of development is this child demonstrating?

a. Fine motor development

b. Vision development

c. Gross motor development

d. Speech and language development

9. A pediatrician is educating parents about the importance of breastfeeding. What is one critical immune benefit of breastfeeding that they should highlight?

- a. Breastfeeding reduces the need for medical check-ups.
- b. Formula is just as effective as breast milk for immune support.
- c. Breastfeeding is unnecessary if the baby is healthy.
- d. Breast milk provides antibodies that help protect against infections.

10. A 2-year-old child begins to walk independently and can throw a ball. What aspect of development does this demonstrate?

- a. Gross motor development
- b. Social development
- c. Cognitive development
- d. Fine motor development

11. After weighing the infant, what is an appropriate way to acknowledge the mother and child

- a. Critique the mother's approach to caring for her child
- b. Discuss the infant's weight immediately without any pleasantries
- c. Ignore them and move to the next patient
- d. Thank the child and mother for their cooperation

12. 5-year-old child has been diagnosed with growth hormone deficiency. What impact will this condition most likely have on the child's height?

- a. It will have no effect on the child's height.
- b. It will result in significantly reduced height if left untreated.
- c. It will only affect weight, not height.
- d. It will cause a temporary delay in growth that will resolve with age.

13. A nurse is preparing to weigh a newborn. Which item is essential to ensure the infant's privacy and comfort during the weighing process?

- a. Good lighting
- b. Disposable cloth to cover the inner scale
- c. Accurate scale

14. Pen and weighing childhood child's weight increases steadily during early childhood, then slows during late childhood. What does this indicate about the pattern of physiological growth?

- a. Growth is unpredictable in childhood
- b. Growth is minimal during infancy
- c. Growth slows as the child gets older
- d. Growth remains consistent across all stages